Concept

The great tragedy of life is that so many people have nothing to do but yearn for happiness without ever being able to find it.

Director's Note

"But I can't stand it any longer, with all these webs of obligation. I can't stand it! I've got to work my way out to freedom." (Mrs. Alving, in Ghosts by Ibsen.) Hedda's despair is that there are so many chances for happiness in the world, but she cannot discover them. It is the want of an object in life that torments her. She searches for freedom from responsibility, to escape from the glass case that is closing in on her, but she finds release only in death.
